SILHOUETTE

Thriller by Simon Brett, by arrangement with Samuel French

In Act I of this ingeniously structured thriller, Detective Inspector Bruton questions actress Celia Wallis about the murder of her husband Martin. Celia is quite obviously in the clear, but Neville Smallwood, the drunken journalist sleeping in her bed, argued with Martin shortly before the murder, and the solution to the initial puzzle seems simple. Act II takes place before the murder, and all our expectations are turned on their heads.

A Funny Thing Happened on the way to Durham

Our Next Production: A Funny Thing Happened on the way to Durham

[10th - 14th July 2018]

A Comedy by Ed Waugh & Trevor Wood

'A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to Durham' is an irreverent and anarchic take on the story of the Lindisfarne Gospels. A sketch-based play, featuring around 40 characters played by just three actors, AFTHOTWTD covers more than 1400 years of English history in just 90 hilarious minutes and includes encounters with many famous historical figures.
